INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this report is to present the findings of a comprehensive street condition study for the City of Mount Pleasant, Texas. Located in Titus County, TX, the city's centroid is located just southeast of US Hwy 271 and I-30, as shown in Figure 1 below (Source: Titus County Appraisal District). Like many cities of this size and character, the street network is laid out as a grid of local roads with multiple connections to TXDOT-maintained arterials and peripheral County roads that have been adopted for maintenance in recent years. Commercial activity is concentrated along TXDOT thoroughfare corridors such as Jefferson Avenue (US 271), Ferguson Rd (Hwy 49), and I-30.

The City's core has a grided layout, and many local roads are used as collectors to and from Jefferson Ave, and the other Arterials. Right of Way varies by type of road, zoning, development era, and sector. However, typical widths, as observed in the field, and supported by Titus County Assessors District, with exceptions, vary between 30 to 50 feet. A notable exception is Industrial Rd, with a 100-foot apparent right-of-way width.

We understand that the City does not currently maintain a right of way and street inventory map with accounting of pavement widths, curb and gutter, and mapping of other features such as storm drain inlets and other structures. Approximation and generalizations of widths and lengths of pavement were estimated from aerial imagery, TXDOT GIS data, and observations of typical conditions.

How to Use this Report

As described further under the Methodology Section, the assessment of the condition of each road is made by an interpretation of the distresses that are observed on the surface of the road. The data inputs do not include design or specification elements that are typically used by a contractor to build any roadway improvements. This study is for planning purposes only. It is the expectation that when each recommended roadway is improved or reconstructed, that the work is fully described in a set of construction drawings for the project.

METHODOLOGY

The method used for this study is the Pavement Condition Index (PCI) method originally developed by the United States Army Corps of Engineers (USACE). Currently, the process and procedure for this method is standardized by ASTM D-6433-03 (ASTM formerly stood for the American Society for Testing and Materials). The method is widely used by local, state, and federal agencies, and is recognized as a viable pavement management prioritization score by the Federal Highway Administration of the United States Department of Transportation, and the Federal Aviation Administration.

The PCI is a condition rating system that evaluates the health of a roadway based on the visual inspection and measurement of various asphalt and concrete distress types. A distress, in the context of the PCI, is a physical condition that can be seen on the surface of the pavement (such as cracking, wearing, or distortion of the surface).

PCI Ratings range from 0 to 100 (worst to best). A PCI of 100 refers to a road typically in new condition, without any distresses. A PCI score close to 0 is assigned to a road that has exceeded its useful life.

The PCI Scale identifies 7 condition categories based on standard score ranges as illustrated in Figure 2 below. Some communities opt for a modified "simple" scale that condenses the categories (not used for this Study).

Since the PCI is arrived at through interpretations of surface distresses, the resulting score is not a direct measure of structural capacity, skid resistance, or road roughness. It is a deductive assessment that approximates the remaining life of a pavement based on heavily researched historic correlations between distress type, severity, and density. As illustrated in Figure 3 below, the PCI approximates where a segment of pavement lies along its life cycle curve.

The S-curve in Figure 3 illustrates key inflection points where the rate of deterioration changes. The PCI method assists maintenance planning by targeting improvements that defer the inflection. This strategy is a core component of a Pavement Management System.

In the Cit of Mt Pleasant, distresses were measured with a vehicle mounted data capture system. The system featured a downward facing camera, a lidar detector, a front-facing camera, an accelerometer, a computer processor, and a GPS detector. Figure 4 is the vehicle that was used throughout the city.

Data for most of the city's network was collected via vehicle detection. However, some roads that were not known at the time to be in the city were collected with windshield inspections and field measurements. These include several county roads that we understand were added to the city's maintenance responsibility in recent years.

The computation of the PCI was aided by the PAVER™ Modeling System. This software was originally developed in the 1970's by the Department of Defense to manage M&R (Maintenance and Rehabilitation) programs for its inventory of pavements. Today, it is on its 6th major iteration, and incorporates GIS features for inputting and exporting data.

The modeling system accepts georeferenced pavement section elements as database units. Pavement observation data, or pavement inspection reports, are input into PAVER, and it reports back a PCI score for each unit.

As illustrated in Figure 5 below, the model can then be used to produce "snapshot" reports of the city's street network condition, identify the best and worst roads, and export the information to GIS applications (when available). The model is also able to generate predictive life cycle curves, based on assumptions regarding the initial build date of roads, if any specific work activity history is known, and other information. These predictive tools become more effective when the system is supplemented with annual roadway project information (in other words by adding more data points to the s-curve).

An example of the importance of data supplementation is a failed roadway that may have been overlaid with fresh asphalt. A single data point may optimistically lead the model to assume that the road was recently built and stretch out its life beyond the real deterioration. However, these misinterpretations can be reduced in the future by tracking annual maintenance activities and periodically informing the model of what work was done where, and what the condition of the road prior to the work was.

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Existing Condition of the Street Network

The City of Mt. Pleasant's street network was divided into 900 analysis segments, and a CAD-based GIS-compatible network basemap was created. Each segment represents an analysis unit in the PAVER model. Unit lengths vary but were roughly divided at major intersections or blocks. Inventory tables show the limits of each segment.

It was found that 50% of the city's roads are in good or acceptable condition, 30% in fair condition, and 20% in poor condition. Figure 6 below details the score distribution across the seven condition categories:

Figure 7 features a color-coded map of the resulting score categories of all city roads. Note that county roads outside of the ETJ, Farm to Market roads, and TXDOT-maintained facilities were not included in the analysis.

The full snapshot inventory of scores across the city's network is summarized in two tables in Appendix A. Table 1 is the inventory of the city approximately organized by quadrant; county roads that were added to the network after direction of the City Engineer are grouped together first. Table 2 is a ranking of road segments from best to worst condition (highest to lowest score). Additionally, the Microsoft Excel file is included in the deliverables to the city for manipulation of data and for the ability to search or parse the information differently.

10-Year Capital Improvement Plan and M&R Strategy

As noted in the Methodology Section, the purpose of this Study is to establish a benchmark pavement management system for the city of Mt. Pleasant. As also described in that section, a working PAVER model of the city's street network was built.

The model was then asked to determine a best-use plan given an annual budget that helps prevent roadways from dipping below a PCI of 55 as a long-term target. The resulting work plan is further described in this section. However, there are several terms that are associated with M&R planning recommendations, and the PAVER model language that should be defined before presenting the data:

- Preventive Maintenance: Work that preserve the top surface or the top layer of a pavement section. Normally this work is applied to defer a good road dipping into the fair category. Examples include crack sealing, fog seals, chip seals, and asphalt rejuvenation.

- Rehabilitative Maintenance: Work that restores some of the structural strength of a pavement section that is beginning to show signs of proximate loading failures (such as block cracking, also known as map cracking). An example includes mill and overlays, mill and fill projects.

- Pavement Reconstruction: As the name implies, these projects rebuild the road with a designed pavement section that includes subgrade treatment, a road base, and a rigid (concrete) or flexible pavement (asphalt). This improvement is needed when the subgrade has failed enough that it cannot be restored.

- Stopgap Measures: This refers to spot treatments targeted at individualized distresses such as repairing potholes, repairing failed utility patches, or repairing relatively small areas of severe distresses associated with base failures.

  The model does not provide microscopic scoping of stopgap improvements. The task then for the planner of maintenance activities is to assess what stopgap work needs to be done, on the year where the work is prescribed. There may be road segments where the model assumes there will be areas that need to be "stop-gapped", however, if no spot improvements are needed, then the road segment should be skipped until the next recommendation to evaluate the need for such work.

- Funded/Unfunded Expenditures: The model refers to expenses or work as funded when it can assume that the work is budgeted. "Unfunded" refers to work that the model suggests be done or planned given the parameters provided, but may not be possible given the budgetary limits set. The reason to track unfunded work is to provide a set of improvements to target should additional budget becomes available.

Table 4 below is the funding schedule of the recommended strategy assuming an annual budget of $1.325 million per year. The Maintenance and Rehabilitation Plan (M&R Plan) is laid out as an action plan in Table 3 at the end of this subsection. This amount was arrived at through discussions with the City Engineer. However, two considerations are important to note:

1. The budget is simply a target; the model would like to spend that money, but when not available the strategy/plan provides a pool of road segments that are worth working on that year. Remainder work can be pushed to the next year, and the plan would just extend beyond 10 years.

2. The annual budget target can be adjusted in the model when desired. For example, to recalibrate the remainder of a plan after several years of work is done.

TABLE 4 – M&R FUNDING SCHEDULE

2022	$ 1,325,000	$ 1,324,929	$ -

2031	$ 1,325,000	$ 1,319,441	$ 1,824,044

Table 5 below breaks down the proposed estimated expenditures per category of work per year.

Importantly, the recommendations should be evaluated with a scoping assessment prior to construction, and a design of the specific preventive, rehabilitative, and/or reconstructive activities. For example, the plan assumes that a professional engineer assists the city in the design of new pavement sections when considering reconstructive projects. There may also be design elements that are needed to make a roadway project complete, such as drainage improvements, pedestrian/ADA retrofits, unanticipated utility relocations, and or variables.
